Miss Geneva Lewis visited her mother, at Index, over Sunday night and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley Cole and Mrs. Elizabeth Nickell, of Lexington, visited Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Cole on Sunday.

The attractive brick filling station erected by Mr. Salyer on the corner of Court and Main streets is now completed.

Miss Ann Blair Keeton of Lexington returned home Monday after a two weeks' visit here with Misses Betty Jean and Janis Arnett.

Miss Ethel Wheeler of Flat Woods is spending the week in town with her aunt, Mrs. C. P. Henry, and her cousin, Mrs. Henry Carr Rose.

Mrs. Joe Fugett and little daughter Janis and Mrs. Ancel Fugett, who visited a few days here with relatives, returned Saturday to Forest, O.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Cole of Oklahoma spent Thursday with their nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carr Rose, and son Herbert.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Gullett and Mrs. Gullett's sister, Mrs. Joe Fannin, went to Lexington on Tuesday. Mrs. Gullett is taking treatments for ear trouble.

Mrs. W. B. Reed of Salyersville visited her husband here Sunday. She was accompanied by their daughter Tressie and by Misses Virginia Prater and Lena Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Donovan of Middletown, Ohio, and Mrs. J. J. Sullivan of Covington are visiting their brother, Phil Donovan, and family, at Cannel City.

Mrs. Edmond Perry of Fleming spent Tuesday night here with her uncle, W. G. Ratliff, and family. She went on to Stacy Fork, where she is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lafe Haney.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Long went to Lexington on Sunday and brought Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Watson to their home in Caney. Mrs. Watson had been in the Good Samaritan hospital for an appendix operation. She is getting along nicely.

Mrs. W. H. Childers called on Mr. and Mrs. Mack, near Frenchburg, on Monday. Her little granddaughter, Pauline Gay, who had spent two weeks with her grandfather and grandmother Mack, returned home with her.

Two weeks ago James Blair spent a week in Ashland with his friend, Don Sebastian. The two boys were on Don's bicycle seeing the town. As they rode down grade on the concrete the bicycle turned over. Don was picked up with one leg so badly bruised that he still goes on crutches. His mother brought him to West Liberty, where he was carefully nursed by two sets of grandparents.

J. D. Lykins, circuit court clerk, has not been well the past two weeks and was seriously ill the past week. He is now able to sit up a little. His son Joe D. Jr. was deputized Monday and has taken charge of the office work. Mr. Lykins was unable to attend the primary Saturday. This is the second time since he became of voting age that he was unable to get to the polls. The other time he was at Hot Springs, Ark., taking treatment for rheumatism. Indications are that Mr. Lykins will be able to attend circuit court next week.

SHOWER FOR NEWLY WEDS

Mrs. Edward Keeton, a recent bride, was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given by the Women's Home Missionary society of the M.E. church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Keeton on Saturday, July 25.

The house was attractively decorated with garden flowers. In the receiving line were Mrs. D. R. Keeton, Mrs. Edward Keeton, Mrs. Boon Howard, Mrs. E. L. Stephen, and Mrs. Martha E. May. Miss Helen Cortes Stacy and Miss Helen Price, in green afternoon gowns, served punch to about forty guests, including several out of town friends.

They were entertained with a mock wedding. Miss Frances Ann Stacy dressed as bride, Master Billy Ratliff as groom, and Miss Marita Ann Traynor as ring-bearer. Mrs. Yandal Wrather sang "At Dawning" and Mrs. Boon Howard sang "I Love You Truly" just before the bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs. R. A. Baldwin. Anita Rose Gullett followed in her car very artistically decorated in orchid and filled with beautiful gifts for the guest of honor. Mrs. Keeton was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Cortis K. Stacy and Mrs. Herbert Traynor.

MONKEY PARTY

Ho! ho! For a monkey mixup!
We'll meet at the house at eight.
We hope not a monkey is missing,
So be there, and don't be late!

This invitation called the young people together Saturday night, Aug. 1. All the "monkeys" in town met at the Methodist parsonage for an evening of fun sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Byars. Several games were played, including a banana eating contest in which the participants were blindfolded. Also, three monkeys had the thrill of riding an airplane.

For refreshments, peanut butter and banana sandwiches, coconut cookies, and punch were served. A barrel of monkeys could not have had more fun.

(Signed) THE MONKEY MIXER

SWEET SIXTEEN

Miss Ella Ruth Childers celebrated her sixteenth birthday last Saturday by inviting in a number of her West Liberty friends and a few of her Salyersville friends for the evening.

After the social hour, the guests were served with punch and cookies.

The girls remained for a pajama party, getting home early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, son Arnold, daughter Ruth, and another daughter, Mrs. Jay Burton, and Miss Ethel Elam spent Monday in Lexington with Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Stacy. Mrs. Stacy and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Jerry Stacy, are just recovering from an illness. Ruth and Ethel remained for the week.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

Less than twenty years from the war that was to end war, the British government has asked for $4,500,000 with which to issue a poison gas mask free to every man, woman, and child in the country.

A factory is to be set up and, as soon as completed, the masks will be distributed. To prevent loss, destruction, or deterioration thru careless handling, they are to be kept at convenient, central points, readily available, however, upon signal.

Meanwhile, everybody is to be instructed in their use.

What a commentary on the present state of international diplomacy! The world peace machinery, purchased at the price of 37,000,000 casualties in the last war, has been scrapped. Peoples are snarling at each other like savages ready to spring.

Only, more's the pity and the irony of it, being "civilized," they will not fight each other like savages. Instead they are planning to poison one another, whole nations at a time.

Such is the true, the ghastly implication of the news from Britain. And it should cause us all . . . to hang our heads in shame.—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Press.

LUNCHEON PARTY

Miss Eula Mae Spencer and Mrs. Drexel Moore were joint hosts at a lovely luncheon-linen shower Friday, July 31, at the home of Miss Spencer in honor of Mrs. William A. Taulbee, formerly Miss Nell Cole.

The house was decorated with summer flowers and a rainbow color scheme was carried out. After the delicious lunchon course was served, the bride was sent on a treasure hunt and upon returning was presented with a cedar chest filled with linens.

Place cards were tiny cellophane bags filled with rice and tied with tulle, and bore the names of the following guests: Mrs. Taulbee, guest of honor; Mrs. Blaine Nickell, Mrs. O. B. Arnett, Mrs. Bessaline Allen, Mrs. Henry Rose, Miss Thelma Spurlock, Mrs. Ora Bellamy, Mrs. J. C. Arnett, Mrs. H. B. Murray, Mrs. Crystal Howard, Mrs. Homer Rose, Mrs. Henry Carr Rose, Mrs. Joe Fannin, Mrs. Jay Burton, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Cochran, all of West Liberty; Mrs. C. W. Mathis, Harlan; and Mrs. W. H. Sebastian, Ashland. Gifts were sent by the following persons who were unable to be present: Misses Nell and Bernice Nickell and Mrs. Dwight Brown, Mt. Sterling; and Mrs. Robert C. Cole of Lancaster.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Prayer meeting and song service at 7:30 every Thursday night.

Sunday school at 10 o'clock a.m.

Church services immediately after Sunday school and also at 7:30 p.m. every Sunday.

Lord's Supper the first Sunday night in each month.

Everybody is invited to attend these services, "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together."

ROSCO BRONG, Pastor

LESLIE — WALKER

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Womack Leslie of Cannel City announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Frances Leslie, to Mr. Harry Robey Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar T. Walker of Glendale. The wedding was solemnized at the First Christian church in Bowling Green on July 25.

Mrs. Walker attended high school at Hamilton college in Lexington, where she graduated as president of her class, president of Sigma Iota Chi social sorority, and member of the honorary scholastic and dramatic sororities. She attended Hollins college, Hollins, Virginia, and was graduated from the university of Kentucky, where she was a member of Kappa Delta social sorority, of the Strollers, and was battallion sponsor of R.O.T.C. She taught social science in the Cannel City high school the past year, and during the summer she studied at Bowling Green Business university.

Mr. Walker was graduated from the university of Kentucky, where he was a member of Kappa Sigma social fraternity, Keys honorary fraternity, and a member of the varsity football and track teams. He is now a medical student in the Louisville Medical college.

ON SAVING MONEY

A Missouri man who recently had his first shave in 52 years estimated that he had saved $800 by growing a beard. What I want to know is, does he have the $800?

That point in economics has puzzled me for years. A family states it likes to live in a certain town because living is cheaper there. But they never seem to have the money they save by living in that town.

A state official proclaims he has saved the state $500,000. But he can't show the cash.

"I saved $8.00 by going over to Slickville to do my shopping," says the housewife, but there is no additional money in the cracked teacup where the savings are kept.

When you tell me that by any act, transaction, trip, or scheme you saved a lot of money, show me the money.

If you can't do that, I win the argument.

A large share of the talk about saving money is pure drivel.

FAMILY REUNION

A family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Leach of Liberty Road on Aug. 2. Thirteen children and nineteen grandchildren were present: Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Brown of London Mills ,Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Leach and son, of Dayton, O.; Mrs. Mary Wheeler of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Dollie Roe and children, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. Lily Long and daughter, of Germantown, Ohio; Mrs. Melvin Stinnett of Lexington; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Lewis of Licking River; Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo May and children, of Flat Woods; Mr. and Mrs. Porter Leach and children and Mr. and Mrs. Glover Leach and children, of Liberty Road; and Venus, Clara, and Luther Leach, at home. It was the first time the children were all together. There were five grandchildren not present.

A lovely pot-luck dinner was served, with baked ham, fried chicken, and all the trimmings. The afternoon was spent in drinking lemonade and making snapshots.

FUGETT — WRIGHT

Virgil Wright and Miss Wilma Fugett were quietly married Thursday of last week.

The bride is the attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fugett. She is a student of the Morgan county school and has a host of friends in the community.

The groom is a clean cut young man who has been making his home with his uncle, east of town. He was graduated from our high school last spring. The class honored him by making him president.

May the young couple have a happy, useful, and prosperous career.

To Lecture Here

Rev. C. E. Coons of Salyersville will deliver a temperance lecture at the Methodist church here at 11 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 16; and at 7:30 p.m. the same day at Cannel City. All persons interested in the Local Option election to be held in Morgan county on Sept. 29 should go and hear Rev. Coons, who has had some experience in such an election and the big question which it involves.

Mr. and Mrs. John Oldfield of Mize were in town one day last week.

LOGAN WINS RACE

In one of the most spirited and hotly contested elections Kentucky has been thru in many years, Senator M. M. Logan led former Governor J. C. W. Beckham in the Democratic primary held Aug. 1 by 2500 votes plurality in a total vote of nearly a half million. Thus Senator Logan will succeed himself in the senate seat he has occupied the past six years.

Mr. Logan has been a loyal supporter of President Roosevelt, and is an able and honest public official.

J. C. W. Beckham, who was Mr. Logan's opponent next in line, has had harsh treatment from his fellow Democrats. There is no man living or dead who has done more for the welfare of Kentucky and her people than has former Governor Beckham. But his own party has repeatedly repudiated him.

John Young Brown, the third man in this spirited race, who a few years ago smashed his way thru a political slate into a congressional seat, did not have voters enough with him to repeat that performance this year. However, Mr. Brown carried his own county and had a following all over the state which materially affected the contest. There were two other contenders in the race but the votes they received neither helped nor hindered the chances of anyone else.

The unofficial totals as reported in the news dispatches in the state are as follows:

M. M. Logan	181,502
J. C. W. Beckham	178,952
John Young Brown	85,965

BARBER

Robert Bruce Barber was born on Nov. 18, 1851. He died at his home on Aug. 2, 1936.

Mr. Barber was married in 1876 to Lavana McClure, who preceded him in death about 22 years ago.

Two children survive: George of Dehart and Tom of Danville, Illinois. Eleven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren also survive.

Mr. Barber had been a member of the Christian church from his early life. Funeral servivces were conducted by Rev. Harlen Murphy at the home on Monday afternoon, Aug. 3, and burial was in the home cemetery on the McClure farm.

STANLEY MAY

Stanley May died at his home here on Tuesday, Aug. 4, aged 35 years. Mr. May had been in failing health for some time and several months ago was taken to a health resort in North Carolina in the hope of overcoming his ailments. He was brought home, however, when the treatment failed to do him any good.

Mr. May leaves a widow, Mildred, and son, Raymond Scott; also his parents, T. C. and Ida May; two brothers, Earl of White Oak and Bill of West Liberty; and a sister, Mrs. J. A. Oldfield of Mize.

Funeral services will be held at White Oak church at 10 o'clock today by Rev. Harlen Murphy, and burial will be in White Oak cemetery.

"Was the third caller you or Morano? And then I remembered two things. Morano took the 2:12 to Philadelphia to check on those finger-prints. He wouldn't've done that if he'd known Kelly was dead. The house was dark and silent when Morano got to Sixteenth street. He thought Kelly'd gone to bed, and so he went to Philadelphia. I was sure of that. And I was sure that the man who killed Kelly wore gloves.

"On a hot night.

"Not because he'd thought of finger-prints, but because he was accustomed to wearing gloves, even in summer.

"It was red-hot the day I came here to tell you about Nolan.

"And your gloves were lying there with your hat."

Peter smiled, faintly.

"I remember, too," he said. "You picked one of them up. But, of course, I might merely have been carrying them."

Barry smiled, also.

"You might," he admitted. "But the glove that fell on the floor was turned inside out. People don't carry gloves that way."

"Well," Winslow observed, "Harwood didn't make any mistake when he said you were a good newspaper man. You're right about everything. My wife was Mrs. Selby. She thought Selby was dead, of course, when she married me. Two or three years ago, I met him on the street. He was d—d decent. 'Believe it or not, I was terribly in love with Julie,' he said. 'I still am. But God knows I'm no husband for her, and you are. You've nothing to fear from me,' he said.

"But I did fear. All my life, I've had one conviction. Murder will out. Everything comes to the surface sooner or later. I urged Julie to get a divorce. 'I can't,' she said, 'without more dreadful publicity. It would ruin your career,' she said. Always thinking of me, Julie is."

He touched the tell-tale magnet, almost lovingly.

"We were still talking about it," he continued, "when Julie went all to pieces again. Just as she had when the tabloids printed the story you saw. I took her to Europe. When we came back, Selby'd disappeared. I didn't even know his new name, and, of course, I didn't look for him. I persuaded myself the danger was over.

"Then came the Jefferson street grab.

"I was upset about what the newspapers said of Judge Hambidge. I'd no idea of what was back of that, of course, and he didn't tell me. I figured that they'd got to him, somehow. And then Morano telephoned, the night of the murder, to say Kelly'd been to the Cocoanut Bar. He'd had the marriage certificate some time, and, through an underworld connection, he knew Selby was alive, but he'd only just found out that Selby was Morano. Someone had told him that afternoon—probably the same man who tipped off Luis' telephone message to Harwood. Kelly had said to Morano, 'Now I've got you, and Hambidge, and Winslow.' 'He has, too,' Luis added, 'unless you can find a way out of it.'"

Winslow's hand closed tightly.

"Julie was upstairs, asleep," he said. "She'd left me an hour before, radiantly happy. I went to see Kelly. Heaven knows what I intended to do. Certainly not murder. I was about to ring the bell, when I saw the key in the door, and used it. Kelly was talking to Hambidge. I recognized the Judge's voice, and slipped into the dining room. Listening, I learned why he had written that decision. And I heard Kelly say, 'If it ain't filed by noon today, I'll have your sister-in-law arrested for bigamy.'

"Hambidge said, 'You can do what you like; I won't file it.'

"The cut-glass decanter was on the table in front of me. I picked it up, almost mechanically. Kelly was in the hall then, shouting 'squealers' and 'beat it.' I suppose I had some vague idea of helping my brother-in-law. I don't know. Anyway, I opened the door between the dining room and the drawing room. And, as I did so, Kelly came in from the hall, closing that door behind him. His left hand was still on the knob when he saw me.

"'More squealers!' he shouted. 'Witnesses! So you heard, did you? Well, by God, you're not going to tell anybody!'

"He lifted his right hand, and there was a revolver in it.

"Another instant, and he'd've fired.

"I hurled the decanter.

"It was just instinct. I didn't take aim. There wasn't time. If I meant to do anything, it was to hit his pistol arm. I don't really know where the bottle did strike. The side of Kelly's head, probably, for it landed against a metal door-hinge, rebounded, fell into a chair, and rolled off to the floor. A moment afterward, Kelly went down in a heap.

"He wasn't dead. A long way from it, for the gun had dropped out of his hand, and he reached for it. I picked it up. Ten seconds later, Hambidge was on the other side of that door, trying to open it, and calling Kelly. I turned the lights out. Hambidge left. I put the revolver into my pocket, and got the certificate out of Kelly's. There was a white push-button in the frame. I pressed it—or thought I did.

"It never occurred to me that Kelly was anything more than stunned. I went home, and burned that marriage certificate. There was no other record; I'd made sure of that. A few hours later, Hambidge phoned to say he'd filed his decision. There was nothing about Kelly in the morning paper. I'd no idea he was dead until long after dinner that night at Southampton."

Barry nodded.

"Of course, my first impulse was to give myself up," Winslow said. "But what good would that've done? They couldn't convict me. I'd killed in self-defense, and could come mighty near proving it. But, in doing so, I'd've given away the secret I'd struggled to keep all these years. I'd've smashed Julie utterly, and ruined Hambidge, and Pat. Nobody was harmed by my keeping my mouth shut. There wasn't a chance of their finding Ridder guilty, or anyone else. If they'd done that, I'd've confessed in a moment."

"I know," Barry declared. "That's what you meant when you said, 'If we have to get the guilty man to free Rogers, we'll do it, but let's give the court a chance first.'"

"Yes."

Peter rose, and went to the window.

"The difficult thing," he continued, "was not to confess. With that boy in jail. But it was letting an innocent man suffer a few weeks, or an innocent woman all her life. If you'd seen Julie's face, when she collapsed, after hearing of Selby's arrest—" He paused. "Of course, neither she nor Hambidge knows I killed Kelly."

Barry said, "They'll never know it through me.

"Bon voyage," he added, blithely, an instant later, his hat in his hand. "And come back soon. I'd like to have you two at my wedding."

Lesson for August 9

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMISSIONED

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-9, 17-19; I Timothy 1:12-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.—Acts 26:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Becomes Jesus' Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—On the Road to Damascus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Appointed for Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—After Conversion, What?

The conversion of Saul of Tarsus is on of the outstanding events of Bible history. It presents one of the strongest evidences of the truth of the Christian faith, for only on the ground of regeneration can we account for the change in Saul's life, and only on the assurance that he met the Living and Risen Christ can we account for his conversion.

As our lesson opens we find the brilliant, zealous, young Jew, Saul, as:

I. A Bold Persecuter (9:1, 2).

He was "yet breathing out threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." The death of the godly Stephen had only increased his determination to wipe out those who were "of this way"—the followers of the One who is "the way." But as he carries letters from the high priest to Damascus which would authorize him to imprison them, he meets the Christ whom he persecutes and he becomes

II. A Convicted Sinner (vv. 3-9).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he finds himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He hears from his holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people—"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands, or untrue accusation upon God's children had best beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with his people that when they suffer, it is he who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposes of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul enters into Damascus not as the haughty persecuter, but as a man trembling and astonished at his own sin. He spends three days shut in with his own soul and God, not seeing, not caring to eat, losing all consciousness of earth, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life is pulled up by the roots as it is displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus. And now God is ready to send his servant Ananias to address Paul as

III. A Converted Brother (vv. 17-19).

The fears of Ananias that Saul might still be a worker of evil (v. 13) are soon overcome by God's assurance that in the praying Saul he had prepared for himself "a chosen vessel" (v. 15) to bear the gospel to the Gentiles and to kings, as well as to the children of Israel. Let us not fail to note carefully that the greatest of all Christian leaders, the apostle Paul, was led out into his life of loyalty and service to Christ by a humble layman. Repeatedly God's Word by precept and example stresses the vital importance of personal work on the part of lay men and women. The leaders of Christian work during the coming generation are now in the Sunday School classes of our churches, perhaps in a little wayside chapel in the country, in the village church, in the mission or settlement house.

Saul knew nothing of that subtle hypocrisy known as being "a secret believer," for at once he made open confession of his faith in baptism, and "Straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God" (v. 20). He became indeed

IV. A Mighty Preacher (I Tim. 1:12-14).

In this passage Paul is writing to his son in the faith, Timothy, about thirty-four years after his conversion. As he looks back over the years he forgets the trials and sorrows, the beating with rods, the shipwrecks, the bitter disappointment over false brethren (Read II Cor. 11:23-28). He remembers only the matchless grace of God that showed mercy toward a blasphemer and persecuter, and counted him faithful, appointing him with "his service."

Paul summarizes that which we know to have been the great life of the world's mightiest preacher by attributing it all in true humility to "the grace of our Lord" which "abounded exceedingly with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." For to him "to live was Christ" (Phil. 1:21).

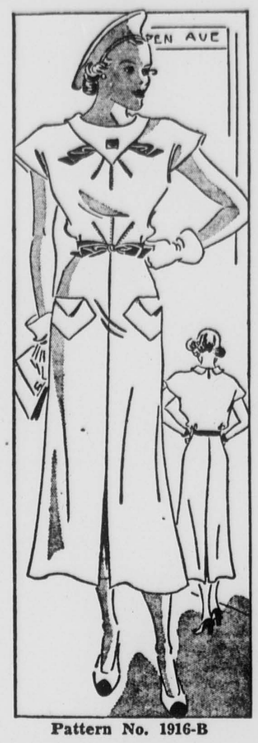
Captivating Daytime Frock



Pattern No. 1916-B

This clever dress features a flattering yoke which dips to a point in front and is equipped with twin slashes a few inches below the neckline to accommodate a ribbon bow of any color you wish to use. Most women like several different ones to which they match their accessories. Radiating tucks at the yoke and waist contribute a smooth fit and flattering effect, while center seams in front and back terminate in two kick pleats for reserved fullness where it will do the most good. The pointed pockets with shaped turned over flaps are novel. You'll want to make more than one dress, because the pattern is so easy to follow and the fabrics so numerous to choose from. How about seersucker, novelty cotton, linen, crash or silk.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1916-B is available for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3 1-2 yards of 39 inch material. Send 15 cents in coins.

Send for the Summer Pattern Book containing 100 Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send 15 cents for your copy.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

If it can be avoided, never wash combs, as water often makes the teeth split. A small brush made purposely to clean combs can be bought. With this the comb should be well brushed and then cleansed with a cloth.

When boiling cauliflowers place them in a kettle with their heads downward. The scum rising to the top of the kettle will not then settle on the flowers and discolor them.

Drain all boiled vegetables as soon as tender. They become soggy if they are allowed to stand unstrained after cooking. The water drained off may be saved for soup stock.

Baking soda will keep the baby's bottles sweet. After using wash the bottles carefully in hot soapy water, sterilize by scalding, then shake in a little baking soda and fill with cold water. Let stand until bottles are used again.

GUNLOCK RANCH

by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

HERE'S an exciting tale of Western ranch life. It has all the customary and necessary parts of a true-to-life Rocky Mountain story plus a lot of unexpected angles that will maintain your interest to the final sentence.

Jane Van Tambel is the heroine, an Eastern girl who comes out West to meet her father for the first time . . . and finds him a crook and thief masquerading under a cloak of respectability. The desire to turn against him is repressed until she meets Bill Denison, her father's mortal enemy. Love appears, and with it comes an emotional conflict that Spearman portrays with mastery.

Should Jane Van Tambel turn against her father or renounce her love for Denison?

This thrilling novel starts in our next issue. Follow it for a wholesome treat!

Eyes Around the World

The films of travel, which carry the vision around the world and back again have vastly broadened the horizons of millions of people, and in that respect have proved to be of high value.

The opportunities of most people for seeing the world are very limited.

The average person in small towns and country places has a very dim idea of the length and breadth of the world, or of the people who live in places remote from him.

Today almost every boy and girl can tell you of the Taj Mahal, or of the Desert of Sahara, or the peaks of the Andes, or of life in remote cities like London, Paris and Constantinople

Mr. Shakespeare informs us that "home-keeping youth have ever homely wits."

But "homely wits" hardly exist when practically all the people of all the civilized countries of the world can, by paying a small price for a seat in a cinema theater look "'round the world and back again."

The camera man has completely replaced the men who used to go forth and view the world and bring home pictures of it to be thrown on a still screen.

From your seat in a theater you can view the Eskimo catching a seal which will provide him with his supper and an overcoat, with a good clear glance at the peaks of the Alps or the Andes or at "Elephants a pilin' teak" in Burmah.

Minds feed on what the eyes see.

Wherever there is anything worth seeing the camera goes.

Loving their work, and eager to bring home pictures of all the known world, these daredevils of the films are never daunted by obstacles, or by dangers.

To me it has always been astonishing that every school room in every city and village and town has not long ago been provided with cameras and screens to aid the children in their work.

Not only would they vastly broaden the view of many sections of the world, but they could, I should think, be tremendously useful in teaching such subjects as biology and zoology.

An intelligent teacher provided with a moving picture projector and a stock of films would never lack the earnest attention of her pupils.

Even pictures which only incidentally show the streets of foreign cities would be valuable. What they would do if wisely used would prove a marvel.

The Parts Books Play in Our Lives

Books may play two different parts in the lives of men. They may build for us the walls of another and quite separate world in which we can take refuge from all that wounds and limits and frustrates us in this one. Or they may be the daily bread of our thought and action.

But whichever part they play whether they are to us the quiet garden in which the spirit dwells apart, or the fuel which feeds the active, militant mind and arms it for its encounter with hard facts, they become an integral part of the texture of our being.—Lady Violet Bonham Carter.

FARMERS' COLUMN

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

The United States department of agriculture announces that during the coming marketing season tobacco inspection services will be maintained at Hopkinsville, Murray, Mayfield, Paducah, Henderson and Madisonville.

Despite lack of rain, J.M. Childress a Carlisle county farmer, cut 125 bales of alfalfa off four acres at the second cutting. He is planning to sow 10 acres to alfalfa in August, first applying two tons of limestone and 300 pounds of superphosphate to the acre.

Boone county farmers sold 47,839 pounds of wool through the county pool for $18,832. Clear wool averaged 39½ cents net and rejections 35½ cents. The clip was handled at a pooling expense of 30 cents per 100 pounds.

Breckinridge county farmers set about 500 acres of tomatoes last month. Contracts called for delivery of the crop at a Hardinsburg station at $10.50 per ton. In some instances tomatoes in part will take the place of the reduced tobacco crop.

The Franch—Bauer Company of Cincinnati has been buying eggs on its milk routes in Campbell county, paying 3 cents extra for top grade, ungraded market quotations for No. 2, and 1 cent less for No. 3 grade. The eggs are graded by licensed grader.

William Shepard, a Powell county farmer, received 4,320 eggs from his flock of 193 White Leghorn hens in June. Receipts from sales totaled $61.60. Feed cost $27.50, leaving a profit of $34.10.

Study Feed Problems

Farmers are still seeding sudan grass in many parts of Kentucky, in an effort to provide emergency pasture and hay. Under favorable conditions, sudan grass will make grazing in two weeks after seeding, and can be pastured until heavy frost, or usually middle October.

With rains over much of the state, lespedeza is growing rapidly, providing grazing and hay. Those who plan to cut lespedeza for hay should avoid pasturing it. Hay probably will pay better than seed this year.

The college of agriculture at Lexington continues to stress the importance of liberal seedings of rye and wheat pasture will help offset the lack of hay.

In many parts of the state rains came in time to produce another crop of alfalfa hay and then grazing.

More straw is being baled or otherwise preserved in Kentucky than in years. The wheat crop was good, and considerable straw is available about everywhere in the state.

Reseeding Lawns

While much bluegrass in lawns has been destroyed by drouth, N. R. Elliott, landscape specialist of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, believes most of the old sod will renew itself when rains come.

If the grass does not come back satisfactorily, he says it may be necessary to loosen the top two or three inches of the soil, fertilize and reseed to bluegrass in September. In any event, many lawns will have spots which will need this treatment.

Fertilizer should be applied about 10 days before seeding and thoroughly raked into the soil. A good high—grade fertilizer should be used at the rate of 10 to 12 pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn. If the lawn renews itself so that reseeding need not be done, then the fertilizer thus need not be applied until October.

Prof. Elliott suggests that now is a good time to dig or pull weeds from lawns. This prevents their maturing seed and lessens the number next year. If there is crabgrass rake out as much as possible, remove and burn the to prevent seed maturing.

Plan now to seed the lawn about Sept. 15. Experiments indicate that about the middle of September is the best time of year to sow bluegrass in lawns.

Forms of City Government

During the past twenty—five years the United States has served as the world's chief laboratory for experiments in local administration. Since 1900 we have tried more experiments in this field than have been undertaken by all the other countries of the world. Every day some American city, big or little, announces that it has abandoned its existing from of government in order to give some other form a trial. However, this is not to be deplored; during this period we have learned more through our experiments than we did in the whole century preceding.

One of the primary systems of city government is the strong mayor form The mayor directly controls the whole field of administration. He appoints all the heads of departments and holds them responsible to himself alone. The complete power of appointment and removal is in his hands, and if anything goes wrong in his administration he has the power to set it right. Under this plan, the mayor is responsible for the formulation of the budget and submits it to the Council, although in most cases the Council can not change the budget at will. In some cases the Council can not make increases, but can make reductions where it sees fit. In most instances even this is subject to the mayor's veto. Thus the Council ceases to be an administrative body and becomes a mere ordinance making body. In most cases it has been reduced in size and its members are elected from the city as awhole, and not by wards or districts.

The advantages of this plan are easy to appreciate. It puts an end to delay and friction, for all administrativ e power is centralized. It gives the mayor a range of power in accordance with his power as chief executive, and under an efficient mayor will give the city a good administration. However, the defects are easily discernible. The Council is reduced in importance, and thus it attracts to it a lower caliber of member. The strong mayor plan of city government is still political and thus subject to abuse, but even though this is true, it is vastly superior to the older scheme of administration by checks and balances.

A plan of city government that sprang into prominence in Galveston, Texas in 1901 was the Commissioner plan. Today this plan is established in many cities. Simplicity is the keynote of this plan. Three to five commissioners are elected by the people of the city and exercise all authority of whatever sort. There is no separation of executive and legislative functions. Each commissioner department but is subjected to supervision and control by his fellow commissioners. The same men prepare the budget, levy taxes, spend the money and appoint all officials. Thus the principle of checks and balances is utterly discarded. The Commission plan was for a while, the most popular and widely praised country; but it soon proved to have its defects as well as its merits, and its career of conquest came to an end. During recent years there has been some reaction away from it.

Finally there is the City Manager plan. It is the newest of the types of city government, having originated in 1908 in Staunton, Virginia. Under this plan, the people elect a small commission or council who in turn appoint the City Manager, who directly controls all departments of administration. All legislative responsibility is placed with the council and all administrative authority is centralized in the manager. This plan unifies the power of government, and yet it aims to preserve a separation between politics and routine, between planning and executing, just as a business does.

This plan provides the means, but unhappily does not guarantee the attainment of the end. It is not the cure for all the evils of bad government, but it is the best plan that has yet been devised for American cities, and the one efficient and democratic plan so far contrived.

BOB JONES' COMMENTS

According to a press story which the writer read recently a certain western college made a survey of the co-eds to find out their idea of values. This is the report. The co-eds placed love and affection first; health second; economic security third; home fourth; children fifth; beauty sixth; the outside world seventh; fashions eighth; youth ninth; recreation tenth; desire to serve others eleventh; and religion twelfth. Comment upon this survey should not be necessary. The emphasis of Jesus reverses the order. He puts God first. He taught that if God had first place, every other relationship in life would be absolutely right. No wonder the world is in a mess. No wonder there is turmoil and strife. The problems of the world will never be solved until men and women have an appreciation of real values. God must be put first.

"A questionnaire sent to 436 ministers in Chicago netted the following results: Twenty percent doubt or deny the Trinity; 29 percent deny the virgin birth of Christ; 16 percent deny His bodily resurrection; 38 percent deny our bodily resurrection; 33 percent deny that the Old Testament prophets could foretell; and 32 percent deny that God ever performs a miracle. The only fact on which they were agreed is that God exists."

The writer has a degree of respect for a man about town who is a blatant infidel and is frank about it. He has nothing but contempt for any man who stands in the pulpit and gets paid for injecting doubts into the minds of the people about the fundamentals of Christianity. If Jesus Christ was not born of a virgin, then the Bible lied about His birth. If Jesus Christ did not rise from the dead, then Paul taught we have no hope. If the Old Testament prophets could not foretell, then Jesus Christ our Lord put His approval upon their false claims. If God did not perform miracles, then the Old and New Testaments are a fabrication of lies. What this country needs is a rugged Christian conscience. If these ministerial infidels wish to form a brotherhood and build their own ecclesiastical machinery, they have that right under our American form of government, but they have no right to remain in our orthodox churches and little by little undermine the foundations upon which our orthodox churches have been built.

FAMOUS SCHOOL OPENING

The Bryant & Stratton Business college, the only downtown commercial school in Louisville, is entering this fall upon its 72nd school year. This is one of the pioneer commercial schools in the country and has trained more than 35,000 successful graduates. The school is a fully accredited member of the national association of accredited commercial schools.

Two new members have been added to the faculty: Mrs. L. B. McIntire, A.B., Depauw university, and Miss Maurine Green, A.B., university of Louisville and a graduate of the Louisville normal school. Mrs. McIntire formerly taught for three years in the public high schools in Illinois, and Miss Green has been teaching shorthand and typing for the past five years in the Louisville girls' high school.

The model classroom for beginning typing students, which was opened last year, has been valuable to the beginning student. Another large classroom has been added and the curriculum strengthened by the introduction of the functional method of teaching shorthand. The entire school is being redecorated for the fall term. The school occupies 15,000 square feet in the Speed building at Fourth and Guthrie streets, in the heart of the city.

A free employment service is maintained for the benefit of the graduates. Business firms of Louisville and vicinity have come to look upon the college as a dependable source of supply for office employees.

The curriculum of the school includes Gregg shorthand, 20th Century bookkeeping, accounting, touch typing, and comptometry, with allied subjects. Special classes are arranged for review students and for high school students who have had commercial courses. A copy of their new catalog is available on request.

REV. CLYDE BOGGS

A David of the Window Sills

By JOSEPH APPELGATE
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

HANS, the window cleaner, had the neck of a grizzly and the features of a bruiser. His lumbering gait was that of a clumsy beast rather than an agile man as at home as a pigeon upon a narrow sill forty stories above Broadway. He was as gentle as a Great Dane and as trustful as a child.

No thought ever entered his mind connecting his pretty little wife with the frequent visits of Ole Anderson, his friend.

It was Hans who brought the revelation to Hilda that Ole was in love with her; but Hans remained unaware of it. On this night Hans returned home in a rage. A catch on his life belt had broken. For one horrible moment he had started falling. Then the other end of the life belt did its work and held him, legs dangling. His cries, heard by office workers, brought about his rescue.

He strode out of the dining room and slammed the door behind him.

Hilda shuddered. She visualized it all. The snap of the catch, the fall, the split second of indescribable horror, the heroic guard pin holding fast!

She sobbed and made a cuddling gesture toward Ole. In a second his arms were about her and presently she was smiling her thanks through her tears. And Ole, knowing much about women but little about this woman, bent and kissed her fiercely upon her upturned, cherry-ripe lips!

Hilda was too astonished to struggle, too fond of her husband's friend to rebuke him. But she was guiltily aware that these kisses were different. Then the door of the bedroom opened and Hans entered to find her in Ole's arms.

"She fainted. She is sick," Ole said, bending over her as she quick-wittedly feigned unconsciousness.

Hans lifted her tenderly in his great arms and bore her into the bedroom, crooning to her with a sound that suggested the purring of a lion.

"Would you marry me if Hans—if Hans—if you were a widow?" Ole asked one night just before Hans came home.

She shuddered. "Don't speak of such things. I don't want Hans dead."

The next morning Ole was at work on the window sill from which Hans had tumbled. Soon his tiny saw had eaten into both of the guard pins on the sill where Hans was due to work within an hour! He looked at his watch. Three o'clock. He would knock off work and wait. The superintendent would excuse him if he reported he was dizzy. Then he would go to the street and wait until the time when Hans—

Ole received his excuse and wandered in nearby streets thinking how well he had done his work, how certainly the afternoon shadows would make unlikely the discovery of the weakened pins. He looked again at his watch. It was now four. Four o'clock! It must have happened. As he approached the corner he could see the open top of an ambulance above a dense crowd gathered about something on the pavement.

A man was speaking. "I was standing right here when it happened. I saw a shadow and dodged. I thought it was a newspaper falling. And he crashed here!" The man had repeated the story twenty times.

Ole turned back. The way was clear now. He would go to Hilda right away, to be there when the news reached her.

Hilda opened the door to his ring. But when he kissed her he thought that she shrank from his embrace.

Suddenly there came a knock at the door. It galvanized him into instant action. He knew what the knock meant. He knew it would be a policeman—he flung open the door. Hans stepped over the threshold!

"I heard your voices so I didn't get out the key," he said, kissing Hilda. "How are you, Ole? You quit early, hey? Well, it was a bad day. A poor fellow on the new building opposite dropped from the thirtieth story. An iron worker." A pause. Suddenly he embraced Hilda again and kissed her tenderly. "It might have been me, Hilda. You know what I found, you two people? I'll tell you. I found that both of the guard pins had been filed almost through on the window sill I was to work on just before quitting time. And if I could get the man who did that—"

He held up that hairy paw and as it worked convulsively Ole somehow remembered a hand he had seen in an advertisement in the subway train. The hand was used to illustrate the futility of criminal living!

Animal Judgment

A writer in the National Geographic Magazine expresses the opinion that the display of plumage is purely instinctive in the male bird in the presence of the female during the mating season. He cites an instance which would seem to establish this view. Doctor Friedman, at Cornell university, some years ago was engaged in a study of cowbirds. A mounted specimen of a female cowbird was placed in a large cage in which was kept a captive male bird. The specimen was not well mounted, nevertheless, she appeared so captivating to the male bird that time and again he manifested toward the counterfeit all the ardor that he would have bestowed upon a live bird. Frequent experiments of this kind have demonstrated that the male bird during the mating season cannot differentiate between the living and the stuffed specimen.—Petersburg Progress-Index.

Recipe Contest At Bo ling Point

Many Women Competing For Cash Prizes And Free Trip To New York

THERE will be mental clinches aplenty when the casual business girl cook and the earnest homemaker begin a record breaking effort to create the best canned food menus. The pantry shelves will creak and groan with the weight of various tinned delicacies and staples as the girls, from sixteen on, start competing for the title of 1936 National Champion of the Women's Exposition Cooking Contest. Women in big cities, country towns, and on the farms will match their wits and skill in preparation to win the prize for the six best recipes using hermetically sealed, commercially canned foods.

Worth While Prizes

This nation-wide competition has been divided into six geographic sections and a winner will be selected from each section. After these finalists are notified by telegraph of their victories they will be awarded a three day trip to New York with all expenses paid and the opportunity to compete, during the Women's National Exposition at the Grand Central Palace on May 25, for the grand prize of $500, and other cash prizes of $250, $200, and $150, and two of $100. Thus each section winner is assured of at least a $100 cash prize.

Who Can Compete

The contest is open to women and girls over sixteen years of age, and each contestant may submit as many complete menus with their accompanying recipes as she wants. There must be six recipes furnished with each menu, each sufficient to serve from four to six persons, and all entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, May 16.

The purpose of the competition is to develop the greatest possible number of excellent menus consisting of foods prepared from canned products so that ultimately a book may be published which will enable the housewife to prepare a complete and appetizing dinner from the products on her pantry shelves.

Society Women Interested

Many socially prominent women are interested in this competition which is expected to accomplish something very much worth while for the cuisine of the whole United States. The committee in charge includes Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Adrian Iselin, II, Mrs. Winthrop McKim, Mrs. Barber Larocque, Mrs. Kenneth Castleman, Madame Queena Mario, Metropolitan Opera star, Mrs. Frederick J. Fox, and Mrs. Bennett Bishop.

Where To Get Rule Blanks

Rule blanks are being distributed by women's clubs, Campfire Girls, Girls Friendly Societies, and by local chain and grocery stores, but, if you have not received one from any of these sources you can get one by writing to the Fifteenth Annual Women's National Exposition of Arts and Industries, Grand Central Palace, 480 Lexington Avenue, New York.*

NOTICE—LOCAL OPTION ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that the Morgan County Court and the Honorable W. A. Caskey, Judge of the said Morgan County Court, has entered upon the order book of said court the following order:

"More than twentyfive (25) percent of the votes cast in Morgan County at the last general election, to wit, 1801 legal voters, having made application by written petition filed with the Clerk of this court asking and petitioning this court and the judge thereof to make an order on the order book of said court directing an election to be held in Morgan County, Kentucky, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters of Morgan County upon the proposition of whether or not spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned in Morgan County, it is now ordered by this court and the judge thereof that such an election be held in Morgan County and at all of the voting places within said county on for the purpose of determining and taking the sense of the legal voters of said county upon the proposition of whether or not spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned in Morgan County, and the sheriff of said county will publish and give the notice prescribed by law, and the Clerk of this court shall cause to be prepared sufficient ballots for that purpose, the proposition to be stated upon said ballots in the following language, to wit:

Are you in favor of adopting the local option law in Morgan County?

YES ☐

and shall furnish said ballots to the duly appointed election officers in the different precincts of said county so that said election may be held as herein ordered and directed, and the sheriff of this county and the clerk of this court are hereby ordered and directed to do and perform all of the things required of them necessary or proper to the holding of said election. Witness my signature as Judge of said court, this the 27th day of July, 1936.

W. A. CASKEY, Judge Morgan County Court."

In obedience to said order, notice is hereby given that on the 29th day of September, 1936, a poll will be opened at each and all of the voting precincts and voting places in Morgan County for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters of said Morgan County upon the proposition whether or not spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned in Morgan County.

Witness my signature as Sheriff of Morgan County, Kentucky, this the 30th day of July, 1936. W. H. STACY, Sheriff of Morgan County.

MORGAN COUNTY SCHOOL PAGE

(Under Auspices of Ova O. Haney, County Supt.)

INSPECTION AND SURVEY

To Ova O. Haney, Supt.,
and Board of Education.

A survey and inspection of all the schools in Morgan county has been completed and the following report is respectfully submitted.

The total enrollment found in all the schools, exclusive of West Liberty Cannel City, Crockett, Wrigley and Ezel was . This indicates that most of the children in the county are in school. There were only a few places where information was received that children were not in school. Attendance certificates are being awarded each month for perfect attendance and the children take a great intrest in receiving these awards.

In the various schools there were found 250 windows panes broken. To replace these broken panes will take about $100. Some of these may have been broken by the children in school, but in most cases they have been broken by persons after schools close.

There are 75 wells in the county. Of these 17 are open wells and 4 of these are being used. The other 13 are either filled up or have no water in them. There are 58 drilled wells and only 22 of these are being used. The other 36 are filled up and have rocks or chunks of wood thrown into them. The wells which are not being used represent a cost of about $1500 which have been destroyed by malicious acts of some one or other. It is more than a mere crime to have children in these schools starve for water because of pure downright meanness, and the parents in various communities should not hesitate to go before the grand jury and indict the evil doer.

About 50% of the school buildings are in bad condition and need repair. The repairs needed are the roofs and foundations and repair of weatherboarding which has been torn off.

Four have already been completed by the NYA boys. They have nailed the roofs and painted them. The cost to the county has been about $2 for each building, which includes the paint and the nails. In some of these they have cleaned out the wells and fixed the steps. The NYA boys are doing good work and take a delight in doing it. They are planing to build the new building at Lenox under a head carpenter. They will also paint the other buildings and repair them just as soon as they can get to them. The plan is new and as an experiment they are working out the details as they arise. One thing needed is a small pickup truck in which they can put their paint, ladders and tools and go from one building to another. Hubert Ratliff and I have been using our cars for this purpose but it is very difficult to take long ladders about on touring cars and a truck would be much more efficient.

One of the worst handicaps is the lack of text books, especially in the fifth and seventh grades. Prof. Ray Davis at Ezel has a supply of seventh grade books and Williams Department store at West Liberty will have them this week. A supplementary requisition for free books has been placed and it is hoped they will be received right away. There are plenty of third grade health books and third grade spellers in the book store.

The teachers are following the course of study and the program as outlined in the handbooks and showing an excellent school spirit. Many of them are planning for activities.

Several Parent—Teachers associations have been organized and there appears to be a fine spirit of cooperation on the part of the parents. The patrons are working together and have a common interest in the school.

There is a great need to stress primary reading especially. Teachers are requested to obtain all the supplementary reading possible and to put all the free material and use it in their schools. The supplementary reading should be less difficult than the regular text. Flash cards, charts, and various materials should be used to motivate the child in reading.

The helping teachers are staying from a half to a whole day on their second visit. They desire to discuss with the teachers plans for the fair and other activities. The chief purpose is to help the teacher improve the learning of the pupils. In some schools the helping teachers are teaching some of the classes and afterward discussing with the teachers how to improve the pupils' learning. We plan to give some achievement tests right away.

BERNARD E. WHITT, Supervisor

POMP SCHOOL NEWS

The NYA boys, under the supervision of Hubert Ratliff, have been doing some repair work on the school house roof the past week. It has been securely fastened and well painted and is in good condition now. They plan to do some other repair work soon.

The boys also cleaned the well, but no water was found, so our teachers, Miss Lewis and Mrs. Fairchild, hired a couple of men to work at the well Friday and Saturday. After shooting the well the third time an abundance of water was found, but the fumes from the shots made it impossible to finish cleaning the well on Saturday. The men will finish the work this week and one of our greatest problems—that of having water on the school grounds—will be solved. One of the patrons, Charlie Perry, also helped in the shooting of the well.

We wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Milford Carroll for the water supply they have furnished us thus far.

Supervisor B. E. Whitt visited our school on Thursday of last week.

The third grade pupils are working on some home booklets this week. The first and second grades are working on objects booklets.

Gene and Evelyn Eldridge were enrolled in the first grade last week.

The seventh and eighth grades are working on some geography and transportation units.

Two double desks of the older type, which were taken up from the schools where new seats were supplied last year, are badly needed to be used under the brush arbor at the back of the schoolhouse. This would furnish a sufficient supply of seats in both rooms and save the fourth grade from carrying the new desks back to the schoolroom every evening. We're hoping that our county superintendent will furnish us these if he has them available.— Eighth grade reporting committee.

REPORT OF HELPING TEACHER
Div. No. 4

This week has been spent in actual contact with the teaching and learning conditions of the schools.

Ihave observed a number of lessons taught, played with the children, and enjoyed everything.

Curtis Elliott at the Lick Branch school plans to enter the school fair and will have one entry in the humerous reading contest.

At Staright Creek, Miss Annas Johnson and Mrs. Elmer Craft have a star baseball team. the pupils are interested and are improving their surroundings. They plan to enter the school fair and to organize a 4-H club.

AtLenox,Miss Daisy Shaver is thrilled to know that she will have a new school building. The present one is nearly ready to fall and has no roof. The NRA boys plan to build it under the direction of Mr. Clarence Hutchinson, carpenter. They are going to organize a 4. H. club and take part in the school fair.

At Laurel Fork, under the direction of James Day and Miss Jewell Wheller, the school has cleaned the grounds and plans to organize a P. T. A.

Mrs. Mattie Williams was pleased to learn that the zone conference will be held at her school and she plans to have a nice building for the meeting. The children in her school will remain until noon for demonstration classes. LENA R. McCLURE

CHAPEL SCHOOL NEWS

Altho we are late with our greeting to the readers of the Licking Valley Courier, we are eager to say hello to every reader.

Our school opened July 15 with an enrollment of 29—not such a big number, but with a lot of strength and ambition. We have a premonition of success this year, due to the fine spirit of unity and cooperation shown by patrons and pupils.

We have a fine building, newly painted inside and out. We have a reasonable amount of equipment, including a globe, a 28 volume library, a water cooler, a teacher's desk, a dictionary, and a sufficient number of seats. The one thing we don't have is a good floor. I have taken it into my hands and decided that this district can have a new floor built this year. I think the patrons of this district will back me on this statement. We are looking forward to pie suppers and what not to help us do this.

We have had two visits from our helping teacher, Mrs. Catherine Byrd, and one visit from Supervisor B. E. Whitt. We are certainly proud of the untiring efforts they put forth to help us in our work. They are urged to visit us as often as possible.

CHALMER FERGUSON, teacher.

ZONE MEETING

A zone meeting will be held in the fourth division Friday, Aug. 7, at the Hutchinson school from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. You may dismiss your school Friday and count the time if you attend.

We want each teacher to take three minutes to tell of some improvement you hope to make in your school this year.

Please have in mind some question or problem you would like to have discussed.

A practical and constructive program has been planned. If you have any ideas to advance, feel free to do so.

I wish you much success in your work, and am looking forward to meeting you at this zone conference.
LENA R. McCLURE, helping teacher

STACY FORK SCHOOL NOTES

Well, here we are back in school with an enrollment of 65. We are progressing nicely with our work in spite of the heat of July weather. We were proud of the opportunity of attending the laying of the cornerstone of the new school building at Cannel City. We were greatly impressed by what was said and done there.

We were entertained for 45 minutes on July 23 by a ventriloquist, Mr. Prichard. On July 24 we were honored by the presence of Miss Burton, our helping teacher. We enjoyed her talk and wish to thank her for the attendance charts she gave us.

We urge that all parents who are interested in our school be present Friday, July 31, for the first P.T.A. meeting of the year. We feel that you are responsible for the success of our P.T.A. meetings and hope that every one of you will be present.

REPORT OF HELPING TEACHER
Division 2

In the schools I have visited this week I not only found the teachers interested but working out some sort of activity.

At Mize, Mrs. Gladys Nickell and Miss Esther Oldfields are planing to buy a water cooler and build a library table and bookcase. They have $4 to buy the material and hope to get the work done by the NYA or by some interested patron.

At Halsey school, Miss Lena Haney has made some nice window decorations and a large number of flash cards in reading and arithmetic.

A picture show was given at the Chapel school and a fourth of the proceeds were given to the school, and the teacher, Chalmer Ferguson, plans to buy a printing outfit to construct a chart and number cards and devices for the primary grades.

At Grassy Lick the P. T. A. have had their second meeting and with the teachers, Rex Byrd and Edward Gevedon, are planning improvement of their building and grounds. The specific things will be worked out and reported when accomplished.

MRS. CATHERINE BYRD

EXTENSION WORK

Richmond, Ky., July 29, 1936
To the Teachers of Morgan county:

The number of people who are interested in extension classes at West Liberty this fall is large enough for us to offer the courses. The courses that will be offered are English 219, which gives three hours of college credit, and Psychology of Adolescence, which gives three hours of college credit.

Both classes will be taught by Dr. Saul Hounchell, a reguar member of the faculty of Eastern state teachers' college. They will meet each Friday evening during the first semester in the West Liberty high school building. The first meeting of the classes will be about September 18; however, we shall notify you later as to the exact hour and date of the first meeting.

If all of those who expressed an interest in taking the classes when I attended your teachers' conference will take the courses, the cost will be about $4 per hour for each hour that you take. If you were not one of those who did express an interest in the class when I attended your teachers' conference, your joining the group will help reduce the cost to all those who take the course. If we have enough new ones to enroll we can reduce the cost to as low as $3.50 per hour. According to regulations, we cannot charge less than this amount.

Hoping that you will take the classes and get some of your friends interested, I am,

Sincerely yours,
SAM BECKLEY, asst. dir. of ext.

POMP 4-H CLUB NEWS

The Pomp 4-H club met Tuesday night, July 28, at the Lower Lickfork schoolhouse, with the president, Miss Juanita Day, in the chair.

After the meeting was called to order and the roll was called, the president called for business. Miss Virginia Lewis moved that the club have a wiener roast Friday night, and Miss Frieda Cox seconded the motion. All voted in favor of it. Virginia Lewis, Frieda Cox, Maxine Ellington, and Juanita Day were appointed as a committee to make arrangements.

Mr. Wrather gave the latest information concerning camp week.

Miss Clemma Carroll gave a short talk on "What the Flag Really Is."

Miss Oleta Day gave "The Description of the Flag."

"The Story of the Star Spangled Banner" was given by the leader, Mrs. Kenneth Fairchild.

The meeting closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Most of the members were present, also a large crowd of onlookers.

Misses Juanita and Oleta Day are attending camp at Quicksand this week. OLETA DAY, club reporter

WIENER ROAST

A large crowd enjoyed the wiener roast given at the Elkfork bridge on Friday night by the Pomp 4-H club.

A large bonfire was built in the creek bed just above the bridge and the wieners and marshmallows were roasted and eaten at twilight.

Present were Messrs. Walter Scott Cox, Roger Hammond, Walter Riggsby, William Adams, Lewis Cox, Stuart Adkins, Byford Hammond, Cletis Day, Randolph Cox, Darrell Rose, Ernest Fairchild, Glenn Johnson, Onyx Lewis, Jim Oakley, Jim Frank Engle, Harold Rose, Junior Davis, Armond Lewis, Raider Watkins, and Stuart and Thurman Caskey; Misses Virginia Lewis, Frieda Cox, Maxine Ellington, Dwayne Lewis, Barbara and Helen Whitt, Juanita Day, Clemma Carroll, Hattie Hammond, Oleta Day, Eva Adkins, Aurabelle Caskey, Mabel Davis, Mary Jewel Caskey, Leanna Day, and Mrs. Green Lewis.

Mrs. Kenneth Fairchild, Mrs. Russel Cox, and Mrs. Ben Cox were the chaperons of the outing.

NOTICE—COAL BIDS

The Morgan county board of education will let coal contracts to the lowest and best bidder in the various sub-districts. The board of education specifies that said coal bids must be received not later than August 10, 10:00 a.m. and said bids must be sealed and addressed to Ova O. Haney, superintendent Morgan county schools and marked on the enveloped "coal bid" and that said coal must be delivered before October 1 and if bidder defaults the board will consider said default a material breach of contract. Before said bidder receives pay he must obtain the approval of the teacher of said school as to quantity and quality of coal delivered.

SUPERVISORY REPORT, ZONE 1

I visited the following schools last week and observed the work going on in the school room: Rockhouse, Spaws Creek, Stacy Fork, Lacey Creek, Sycamore Grove, and Centerville. Splendid effort is being put forth and good results are being gained in each of the above schools.

I wish to urge the teachers to continue such splendid work and enforce the fine ideals which they have set up for the school year.

NELL BURTON, helping teacher

TRAINING WORK AT WRIGLEY

The training work center at Wrigley observed July 20 as visitors' day. They had quite a number of visitors.

The display was made up of a complete family wardrobe consisting of all kinds of clothing for men, women, and children. The women were working hard and seemed to be enjoying their work under the supervision of Mrs. Rose Blackwell.

The room was well cleaned and the work was nicely displayed. We wish to extend our appreciation to those who made it possible for us to do this work.

ESSAY WANTED

George S. Owsley has completed plans for the judging and awarding of the essay which will win the $10 fishing outfit. Essays must be not less than 100 nor more than 200 words. Give the name of your school and the name of your teacher on your paper.

Send essays to Geo. S. Owsley at West Liberty before Sept. 30. Prize will be awarded on second day of school fair.

FOREST MANAGEMENT

Many people have asked, just what is the purpose of the Cumberland national forest? The answer is, to protect the watershed of the navigable rivers and streams and to create a national reserve of timber. what is to be the use of this forest? And back comes the response that the forest will be used or handled to give the greatest number of people the most benefit. It is rather difficult to state just now what the principal use will be, but we know that one of the main uses will be timber supply.

Timber management is a branch of the forest service that all other branches rotate about. True forestry depends upon good timber management, for when we think of forestry we think of growth, logging and utilization of the trees, which are fundamentals of timber management. Through proper timber management, a stand that now has three thousand board feet per acre can be stepped up to around six thousand board feet or more. Also, this timber will be of better quality.

This county is in need of good timber management if we expect to have a constant supply of timber. when we look at the history of the timber industry we will find that almost everything has been protected except good management. It has been the policy of our large timber companies, in most cases, to cut and get out. This is plainly shown by our persent stands from New England to the west coast. When one area was completely logged, the company moved to some other location, leaving behind a land stripped of timber which usually burned over within a few years, destroying what was left. This practice, of course, was detrimental to. not only the forests but to the land as well. Floods and drought followed the cutting and fires, and at present we have second hand forests where mature stands would be if good timber management had been practiced.

The United States government, realizing that the timber was being utilized faster than it was growing, created the national forests to protect the watersheds and preserve timber for the time when a shortage will occur.

From past experience, we find that the private individual or company has not been interested especially in the welfare of the public, and if something is not done to conserve our natural resources of timber, we as a nation will soon be dependent upon other countries to supply us. There are not so very many countries that have timber to spare, but regardless of that it would be a very deplorable situation for a large country like the United States to have to depend upon foreign nations for its timber supply.

These national forests do not lock up the timber and allow it to die and rot. That would not be good management in any sense; neither does it cut it all off or sell it just to the large companies. What happens to the timber on national forests is this; First the timber is inventoried to find out just how much there is on the forest. Then the rate of growth is determined in order to know just how many thousand feet are being added each year. There are various factors entering in but, after a time, the amount of timber that the land is capable of producing under good management is computed. From these figures, the amount that can be cut each year is calculated. This is never more than the annual growth. It then becomes evident that by such management, with the annual cut and annual growth so balanced, the operations in the forest can go on indefinitely. Fire, insects, and disease are the greatest factors which may upset this balance and must be constantly combated.

The timber on the Cumberland national forest is at the present time in most cases too young to sell. That means there will not be any timber sales of any great size until the timber is old enough or has reached the size to log. How long it will be before this timber will be ready for market depends upon several factors. The most important is fire which sets back the growth from five to fifty years, depending upon the intensity of the burn, and at the same time lowers the grades by reducing the quality.

When this timber is ready to cut, the public will be notified that certain areas are ready for logging. The newspapers will carry notice of this prior to the time that the sale is to be made. Anyone has the right to bid on the timber. The bids are sealed and are not opened until a certain date. The bid is then awarded to a bidder under certain conditions. These conditions are such as to warrent the correct cutting methods in order not to wreck the remaining stand.

These sales vary from a few cords to several thousand feet, depending upon the size of the stands or the demand of the purchaser. Many sales are made to individuals who want only stove wood or a chance to do a little logging through the winter months. The price is the same as the going price of timber in that locality at the time of the sale.

The counties from which timber is sold will receive part of the money back. Thirty five cents from every dollar taken in on a timber sale is returned to that county for schools and roads. Every public spirited citizen should take an active intrest in preserving the national forest in his county and thus increase this revenue.

For futher information along these lines, write the Forest Supervisor. U. S. F. S., Winchester, Kentucky.

SYSTEM

I used to know an owner of a country town newspaper whose friends said he didn't have any system. They said he didn't know whether he was making money or losing money. But he knew. He had money in the bank. He retired from business early in life, and the last I heard of him he was living in comfort, still without any system.

GRASSY LICK SCHOOL NEWS

The P.T.A. met Friday, July 31. This organization is sponsoring a pie supper at Grassy Lick on August 15. The proceeds will go to buy equipment and paint for the school. There was much interest shown at the meeting, and thru the help of this organization the school will be more able to carry on its work thruout the year.

The children are eager to get their gold star at the end of this month, and due to this fact our attendance has been almost perfect this month.

The interest of the children and the cooperation of the parents encourages us to believe that this will be an outstanding school year for Grassy Lick.— Rexford Byrd and Edward Gevedon, teachers.

THE CHURCH GOER SMILES

The reasons often given for staying away from church are rather ludicrous when applied to some other institution. For example substitute "the movies" or dance hall.

1. I'm out of the habit of going to the movies, I'd better not go tonight.
2. I have not been to the movies for so long the walls would fall in if should go.
3. I know a man who has gone to the movies for years and he is no better than I am.
4. There are as many good people outside of the movies as inside.
5. Too many hypocrites attend the movies they don't live up to the teaching of movies and so I stay home
6. I stay away from the movies because of the kind of folks who support them. I wouldn't sit in the same room with Mr. So—and—So.
7. The performers get more money than I do—why should I keep them in good cars and expensive clothes?
8. I don't like the people in charge of the movies.
9. I can get the same relaxation and inspiration that I get in the movies elsewhere.
10. I stay away from the movies because I went when I was a child, and got fed up on the stuff.
11. I need new clothes before I can go to the movies.
12. I have a friend visiting me and I don't know whether he likes the movies or not, and I never meddle with a man's private opinions.
13. I don't go to the movies because they admit foreigners.
14. I don't go to the movies because the directors never call on me.
15. I don't go to the movies because when I went the last time not a soul spoke to me.

Spanish Government Is Checking the Rebellion

REPORTS from various sources when analyzed indicated that the Spanish government was more than holding its own in the desperate fighting with the Fascist rebels. It was sending men out to check the advance of General Mola's columns on Madrid from the north and bombing rebel strongholds in that part of the country, as well as Cordoba and Seville in the south and Ceuta and Melilla in Morocco. The loyalists won decided victories at Caspe in the Guadarrama mountains where the rebels were trying to break through to Madrid, and at Oviedo.

C. G. Bowers

Mola's officers explained that he was waiting for the arrival of General Franco's forces from the south, but those troops had not been able to get very far in their advance on the capital. Their chieftains, however, professed to be confident of ultimate victory.

Claude G. Bowers, American ambassador to Spain, was cut off from communication with the summer quarters of his embassy at San Sebastian for several days, being himself at his summer residence in Fuentarrabia, close to the French border. He finally got in touch with the embassy and removed the staff to his villa. Mr. Bowers also provided safe haven for a number of other foreign diplomats and their families. He said he had ascertained that not a single American had been injured in the civil war. American warships and liners were utilized to evacuate all the Americans in ports where their lives were in danger.

Nazi-Polish Quarrel in Danzig Is Ending

ACCORDING to announcement by a Polish news agency which is generally considered to be the mouthpiece of the Polish foreign office, an accord has been reached between Berlin and Warsaw on the policies to be followed in the Free City of Danzig. The Nazis are said to have agreed to give explanations that will take the sting out of recent incidents in the city. The texts of notes exchanged between Germany and Poland will be submitted to the League of Nations before being made public.

Vimy Ridge Memorial Unveiled by Edward

MORE than 100,000 persons stood in silence at Vimy, France, as King Edward VIII of England unveiled the magnificent memorial built by France to commemorate the heroic capture of Vimy Ridge by the Canadian forces in April, 1917. After greeting President Lebrun of France in French, the king said:

King Edward

"We raise this memorial to Canadian warriors. It is an inspired expression in stone chiseled by a skillful Canadian hand of Canada's salute to her fallen sons. It marks the scene of feats of arms which history will long remember and Canada can never forget. And the ground it covers is the gift of France to Canada."

The dedication culminated ten years of labor and an expenditure of about $1,000,000 on erection of the memorial. The work was completed after earlier delays in construction because of difficulties in finding the 7,000 to 8,000 tons of special stone required.

Walter S. Allward, Toronto architect and sculptor who designed the monument for the Canadian battlefields memorial commission, supervised the preparations for the unveiling.

Sir Henry Wellcome, Scientist, Dies

SIR HENRY WELLCOME, who was born in a log cabin in Wisconsin 82 years ago and who became one of England's greatest scientists and explorers, died in London following an operation. His scientific achievements ranged from the establishment of physiological laboratories to pioneering in the field of archaeological survey through the use of airplanes. He won the Royal Humane society life saving medal in 1885 and as late as 1927 founded the Lady Stanley Maternity hospital in Uganda, Central Africa.

Queen Mary Sets New Atlantic Record

THE Queen Mary, Cunard White Star line's great liner, set a new transatlantic record in her latest crossing to New York, taking the blue ribbon of the sea from the Normandie of the French line. Her time from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose lightship was four days, eight hours and thirty-seven minutes. This beat Normandie's record by three hours and five minutes, but Queen Mary's course was somewhat shorter than that taken by her rival, and the latter still holds the speed by hour record.

Flying out to greet the British liner, a big seaplane piloted by Capt. W. W. Wincapaw fell to the sea. The nine persons aboard were picked up by a boat from the liner Exermont, but one of them, E. T. Ramsdell, a Boston newspaper photographer, was fatally injured.

Repudiate Debts If Lemke Loses, Says Coughlin

FATHER CHARLES E. COUGHLIN, speaking at the home-coming celebration for William Lemke at Hankinson, N. D., advised his hearers to repudiate their debts if the Union party candidate were not elected President. "And if anybody tries to enforce them," he added, "repudiate them also." This, the priest declared, is the only way out.

Board Is Appointed to Study Drouth Remedies

SCATTERED rains over limited areas brought only temporary relief from the heat and drouth, and then warm weather started a new advance over the corn belt. The federal crop reporting board in Washington said the drouth was as severe as that of 1934 and worse than any since the western country was settled. The serious conditions prevailed over practically the entire area from the Rocky mountains in Montana to the Hudson valley in New York and southward over western Pennsylvania, central Maryland, the Ohio valley, parts of Arkansas, and most of Oklahoma.

M. L. Cooke

It was announced in Washington that President Roosevelt had created a national committee to study measures for remedying conditions in the drouth region through utilization of natural resources. The committee is headed by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Other members are Col. Richard C. Moore of the army engineers; John C. Page, acting commissioner of the bureau of reclamation; Frederick H. Fowler of the national resources committee; Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

Mr. Roosevelt intends to make a trip through the drouth area late in August.

Many Quitting the CCC to Take Private Jobs

DIRECTOR ROBERT FECHNER reports that nearly 13,000 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps left that organization during June to accept private employment, and he said this was largely attributable to the general improvement in business conditions, and in part to the practical education given the men.

The exact number discharged in June was 12,995, the largest group to quit since the corps was reduced to a maximum of 350,000.

Nominations for Senate Are Made in Iowa

IOWA Republicans nominated Barry Halden of Chariton, editor and American Legion leader, for the United States senate seat made vacant by the death of Louis Murphy. His Democratic opponent is Guy M. Gillette.

The state Farmer-Labor party delegates met in Des Moines and named former Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart as their candidate for the seat. Until recently he has been connected with the New Deal farm organization.

Ousting of Eleanor Holm From Olympic Team

PROBABLY the controversy over the ousting of Eleanor Holm from the American Olympic team is destined to be long lived; but it is difficult to see how the committee could have done otherwise in the circumstances. The backhand swimming champion, who is Mrs. Jarrett in private life, refused to obey the training rules and indulged in several drinking parties on the ship that carried the athletes to Germany. She disregarded warnings, and afterward said the officials knew she liked "a good time, particularly champagne." Her defenders seem to think she was old enough and experienced enough to be permitted to do as she pleased, regardless of the effect on discipline.

Third Party Is Doomed to Fail

Will Hurt Landon, Not Roosevelt; See Great Fight Ahead; Coughlin's Break

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON.—When Father Coughlin stood on the platform in Cleveland, addressing the Townsend Old Age Pension convention, and called President Roosevelt a "liar and a betrayer," he started downhill then and there. His tirade was a part of the midsummer madness of a general political ferment of the members of a kind of lunatic fringe (as Theodore Roosevelt would have termed them) and now that it is all over, even with the attendant apologies, I will state with some authority that the third party movement in this country this year will be a failure.

All that agitation at the Cleveland convention of the old age pensioners, the Huey Long Share-Our-Wealthers, the radio priest followers, and Bill Lemke, was staged partly to attract the attention of the men who would finance anything to hurt Roosevelt. If these anti-Roosevelt millionaires believed the Lemke third party and the Coughlin Union for Social Justice could draw votes from Roosevelt to elect Landon, they would put carloads of money at Lemke's disposal. But they are practical men. They feel that the outburst did not hurt Roosevelt. Some think now this Lemke party, if it gets going, will draw more from Landon than from Roosevelt.

THIRD PARTIES FAIL

It takes more than abuse and hysteria to elect a president, or to draw from the strength of a candidate. It takes well planned organization to elect a president; and no movement without such organization can effect much. Lemke right now has nothing in the way of an organization. He may not even carry his own state of North Dakota. We have had two parties promising a rosy millenium for several years; one as the Socialist party, and other the Communist party; but scarcely anyone who reads this will realize that these two parties really put on regular campaigns — which get anywhere.

The Bull Moose campaign was a third party effort which split the G. O. P., and elected Woodrow Wilson. In 1924, the elder LaFollette ran on a third party ticket when Coolidge opposed John W. Davis. La Follette got about 4,000,000 votes with a large section of organized labor helping him, but he carried only the single state of Wisconsin. This is not a country where third parties are successful. The logical third party this year would have been one led by Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, but he looked the ground over and decided that a third party would get nowhere.

PRETTY FIGHT AHEAD

The Democratic campaign will start late by predetermined counsel; and when it starts you will see a pretty fight. Roosevelt has always been a spectacular campaigner and this time he has the world of reaction and selfish interest against him. They've been trying to waylay him from the time he first started years ago in New York. Now that he has cut down the power trust a little bit and has started on his effort to spread opportunity and jobs to the rank and file of folks, the big boys simply are beside themselves with fear that he will continue his democratizing processes. Hence the campaign of anti-New Deal hatred. The opposition will have $4,000,000 in the Republican campaign chest; but it will have possibly $15,000,000 more in money resources behind propaganda organizations which will not have to account for their expenditures. This money will be used for anti-New Deal propaganda which the Republican National committee can disclaim if it wants to — but which helps the Landon chances . . So the Democratic campaign will, I take it, be a person-to-person affair . . . There isn't the slightest chance of Roosevelt getting any really big money—and it will be all the more glorious a personal victory if he wins over this array of reaction, which I think he will.

NEW DEALERS CONFIDENT

Landon's managers are making a great show of farmers who say they will vote for Landon. And in truth there is a fair battleground in the farm states from Colorado east to Ohio—the regular midwest farm sector. The Republicans may have the East as they claim—but they've simply got to have those middle west farm states; and they are certainly making a bid for them. The Democratic campaign has not yet started and when it does there will be a stiffening of the battle. The New Dealers are confident they will have a good record to refer to and a good platform to offer; they know that the farmers are better off now than in the previous administration; they know they have refinanced a million farms, and that the farm debt is not anywhere nearly so much of a burden as it was. They will make considerable of the electrification program for farms; and they will explain the truth about the tariff and the reciprocal trade agreements which the Republicans are now dishing out a bit at a time, but never telling the whole story. However, it will require a strenuous campaign; and if the Democrats would get a trifle scared and not trust too much to luck they would be better off. They have a traditional Republican crowd to deal with in many farm areas; the old pull to vote Republican is going to be hard to overcome; and right now the Republicans are telling the farmers that the G. O. P. had a better New Deal than even the New Deal itself. "We can offer you all these bounties from Washington, too," they will say, "and our bounties will give you more and cost the country less." The old fakers selling medicine from the tail of a cart couldn't do better . . .

FARMERS FOOLED

American farmers were suckers when they listened to the tariff promises of previous administrations. The Smoot-Hawley tariff did everything for industry — and knocked the farmer flat. It reduced farm exports to a pitiable trickle instead of a great stream; and it is that world-market we are trying to regain through the action of the present reciprocal trade agreements. These are give-and-take arrangements. You take our manufactured machinery and we will take your rubber." "You buy our clothing and we will take your coffee." Things like that. Now the effort is being made by industry to make the farmers believe that the country is being flooded with foreign agricultural products. That will make farmers want an old time tariff which protects the manufacturer . . . but which is death to the farmer . . . the old story. International trade is not a one-way affair, when you sell you must buy from the people you sell to. It's the same between nations as between people in any town.

When you make it tough for a fellow to deal with you, he is not going to throw any business your way. Incidentally, these high tariffs abroad are what is making the international trouble and the threat of wars abroad. Our good neighbor policy and reciprocal trade agreements are exactly the opposite.

The fact is that we are not letting in oceans of wheat, corn, rye, oats or butter. Those are protected by a proper tariff. Apart from Cuban sugar, which comes in under a general quota agreement to supplement inadequate continental production, not over three per cent of our agricultural imports, either directly or remotely competitive, can be attributed to trade-agreement concessions. Farm prices in the domestic market are about twice as high as they were when the Roosevelt Administration entered office and farm income last year was nearly two-thirds larger than in 1932. True enough, imports are on the increase, but so are exports, which is the entire object of these trade agreements.

SPEECHES FALL FLAT

There isn't a cheer in a carload of Landon's speeches. He makes a speech that doesn't even stop people from gossiping with each other when they sit about the family radio and forget to listen. After a session with the governor's acceptance speech as G. O. P. nominee, America turned off the radio with the expression "Oh, Shucks. . . . Too bad, for here's a fellow who is going to spend the summer and fall wrapping himself in the Stars and Stripes and pointing at the Constitution." Ordinarily there's an act which always brings down the house with applause. But Governor Landon is not able, even with the oldest sure-fire device of the soap boxers, to start a riot among the listeners. This sad fact reduces interest in the campaign.

As I take it, the governor thinks that prosperity comes back whenever there is a Republican in the White House. Landon's plaintive promise that everybody would be employed by a restoration of the old baronial free-for-all Hoover day economies, was almost too much to bear. Unemployment, as he fails to see, is not a political matter; it is a tough problem of the machine age which is turning out more and more goods and employing fewer and fewer men.

So far I have seen and heard nothing as to just what Landon will do in the event of his election. The things he advocates are under way; many of the things he fails to advocate are also under way and are giving the country courage.

Landon threw away all organized labor support in his acceptance speech; but he gains the warm support of the big manufacturers, like the U. S. Steel outfit, whose labor policies are dictated by J. P. Morgan. In this, too, he helped the Pennsylvania Democrats carry that rock-ribbed G. O. P. region for Roosevelt, because the mine workers there are bitter toward the Republicans. The Landon relief views are hazy; the G. O. P. platform declares for relief by states; Landon seems to hanker after federal relief—but says he can reduce the cost by "taking it out of the hides of politicians." If he thinks he can turn a horde of Republican politicians loose on the administration of a billion and a half of relief money—and show a profit then the G. O. P. has lost its cunning at skimming the cream.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Fair Sex

BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF.—Up here in the Bohemian club's grove where, during the summer encampment, no women are allowed either at large or on the leash, I've been thinking about their little peculiarities.

If two women were cast away on a desert island with just each other for company, and after, let's say, ten or fifteen years, the rescue steamer arrived, they'd both be half way up the gangplank before either remembered the really important things she'd been intending all along to say to her companion; and no matter if the tide were falling and the wind rising, they'd stop right there in their tracks and thresh it all out.

Irvin S. Cobb

If you doubt this, see what happens when a pair of them are swapping good-bys, after an all-day conversation, on finishing a long chatty motor trip together. If they can find a narrow doorway where they'll block traffic, that's where they'll halt, always.

It's a curious sex, any way you take it. But we men keep on taking it and liking it. I don't know whether we're dumb—or numb. Must be one or the other.

Chip Off the Old Block.

CELEBRATING his fifth birthday the other day, my small grandson and namesake met another gentleman of like age who bragged that his nurse brought him to the party in a car.

"Can your mama drive a car?" inquired the guest.

"No," answered my descendant, "but I'm going to teach her. All you do is start off and keep going till you have to stop, and then you say, 'Damn those red lights.'"

It would appear that Cobby has been listening to his grandfather.

Praising King Edward.

IF HE was a Communist, of a breed who are usually half-baked mentalities, it was only to be expected that his effort to murder King Edward should be—thank heavens—a fizzle.

If he was a lunatic, then he's the kind of lunatic who should spend the rest of his days behind high walls. If he was a deliberate assassin—well, at least he gave a gallant monarch a chance to show how gallantly monarchs can behave in the face of danger.

Any man, given the royal background and an open path to the throne, can be a king, but not every king is a man. This king is—he proved it and this part of the world rejoices at the outcome.

The Troubles of Europe.

WE MAY have our own troubles, including so many mounting taxes over the land and so much mountain music over the radio, but what with Spain rent by internal war, and France having strikes which almost approximate war, and Poland threatening revolt against Nazi control of what, laughably, is called the "Free" City of Danzig, and the rest of them pretty generally stewing in their respective political casseroles, we're lucky.

In fact I can think of but one thing the European nations have which we could use, but, alas, will never get, needless to say. I refer to the money they owe us.

How the League Performs

UNDER the rattle of the machine guns and the shrieks of the victims as civil war flames across Spain, that faint creeping sound which you hear, sounding something like a mouse in the wainscoting, is the League of Nations taking its customary prompt steps to enforce peace upon this and all other distracted countries whatsoever.

By the way, does anyone remember when, once upon a bygone time, there was a war to end the persistent disease called war, a final war which forevermore would restore true democratic principles and motherly love to rival nations and embittered peoples? To date the result makes one almost despair of ever finding a cure for my dandruff.

Pandas Live in Trees

The panda, not to be confused with the giant panda, is a scientific puzzle. In some ways he looks and acts as if he might be a relative of the raccoon. In other ways he seems to be kinfolk to bears. Scientists never have been able to decide this question, so they gave him a family name of his own, Aelurus fulgens. In their native Nepal, pandas live in holes in trees and sometimes hide among the rocks. They are nocturnal creatures, and it is customary for them to have twins. Their cry is a sudden squawl.

Quilt of Applique Is Popular; Easy to Do

Pattern 1191

You can have good luck tokens 'round you year in, year out, if you make this Bluebird quilt, and such a simple one it is too, in easy applique, with each bird all in one patch. You may make the birds uniform in color or vary them by using up colorful scraps. Thus using but three materials.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY CAN FIND NO TRAPS

JERRY MUSKRAT was puzzled. He was very much puzzled. When he discovered that the stranger had left pieces of carrot and apple at some of Jerry's favorite eating places he had guessed at once that a trap had been set in each one of those places. So, for a whole day he had kept away from them. Then curiosity had been too much for him. He just had to go over to see if those delicious tid-bits were still there.

The first place he visited was an old log partly under water. On the part above water were several pieces of carrot. Jerry swam along both sides of that log and made sure that there was no trap under water. Then he crawled up on the bank beside that log and looked carefully for signs of a trap. He could find none. There certainly was no trap where those pieces of carrot lay in plain sight on that log.

It seemed to Jerry that he simply must have those pieces of carrot. He tried to turn his back on them and go away, but he couldn't. He knew he was foolish, but he finally, very, very cautiously crept up on that log until he could reach out one paw and knock a piece of carrot off. Nothing happened. Jerry jumped down and ate that piece of carrot with relish. Then he climbed back and did the same thing to another piece of carrot. Finally, he had eaten the last piece of carrot and nothing had happened.

Then Jerry visited in turn the other places where the stranger had left good things to eat. At each place temptation proved too much for him, and he ventured to take those good things. He ate until his stomach was full and then he carried what was left over to his house. At none of those places could he find the least sign of a trap.

The stranger came the next day and left more good things, and that night Jerry had another feast. The following day the stranger did not come, but the day after he did. As before, he left good things to eat, and, as before, Jerry got them to the last scrap.

But all the time Jerry was puzzled. He couldn't understand why that stranger was bringing him all those good things to eat. At the same time, Jerry was growing careless. He no longer used his eyes and nose so carefully when he approached the places where those good things were left. In fact, sometimes he was in such a hurry to get them that he didn't look at all, but just scrambled up where the good things were. You see, not once had he found a single thing wrong. He was beginning to doubt that the stranger was a trapper at all. In fact, he was beginning to look on the stranger as a very good friend indeed.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

GOOD THINGS FROM GOOD COOKS

WHEN you cannot think of a different salad for your family try:

Cottage Cheese With Figs

Mold well seasoned cottage cheese into dome shapes and dispose on crisp lettuce. Cut plump figs into halves and arrange in an upright border around the cheese. Serve with french dressing.

Veal and Ham Pie

Cut one pound of veal steak into inch dice and place in the bottom of a casserole. Over it arrange one-half pound of cooked ham cut into strips. Then add four hard cooked eggs cut into halves lengthwise. Dissolve one bouillon cube in a cupful of boiling water, add one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika, one tablespoonful of onion juice and one pint of tomato pulp. Pour this over the meat and cover with:

Vegetable Crust

Take one each of grated raw carrot and parsnips, one pint of mashed potatoes, one-half cupful of melted butter and salt and pepper to season. Spread, after blending well, over the pie, leaving it rough on the top. Cover with oiled paper for the first hour of baking.

Molded Crab Meat

Dissolve one package of lemon-flavored gelatin in one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Chill slightly and add two cupfuls of crab meat, three-fourths of a cupful of finely cut celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pimiento, one teaspoonful of onion juice and one-half cupful of mayonnaise. Put into a mold and chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with stuffed olives and sweet pickles.

JUMPING ELASTIC

The magician shows a rubber band around the first two fingers of his left hand. He uses his right hand to snap the elastic, proving that it is tightly in position.

Bending his fingers inward, the magician lets everyone see the elastic about the first two fingers. Magically, the rubber band jumps to the last two fingers of the hand.

This trick is very deceptive. The actual trickery begins when the magician snaps the elastic with his right hand. Holding the palm of his hand toward himself, he draws out the rubber band; then bending his fingers, inserts all of them into the loop thus formed.

Turning his hand so only the back is seen, the magician shows the elastic apparently on the first two fingers only. A quick extension of the fingers; the rubber band jumps.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Warm Weather Vs. Reducing

AS SUMMER progresses, the warm weather gives a favorable opportunity to those who are seriously considering the reduction of their weight.

During warm weather much less food is eaten because about 80 per cent of the food we eat is used simply to keep the body warm and all its processes working nicely. Only about 20 per cent is to supply energy for work or exercise. We don't need to keep as warm during the warm weather.

Thus less food is necessary anyway and that gives a good start toward weight reduction.

Another favorable point is that the rich or concentrated foods which put on weight are not as popular or palatable — do not invite use to the same extent — as the foods that are not so rich or concentrated. Thus we find that foods that have more cellulose or roughage, foods that are more "straw-like" in character, are eaten in greater amounts during the warm than the cold weather.

Dr. Barton

Salads, both fruit and vegetable, form a large proportion of the summer diet which not only helps to overcome constipation, but prevents increase in weight.

What are known as the high residue foods—containing more fibrous tissue which the body does not absorb—are the fruits and vegetables containing the straw-like cellulose which surround the actual food part of the fruit and vegetable.

The high residue fruits are: figs, dates, apricots, prunes, raisins, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, peaches, pears, plums, grapes, apples, strawberries, cantaloupe, oranges, lemons, grapefruit and rhubarb.

How to Pick Foods.

The high residue vegetables are: peas, beans, green peas, lima beans, corn, parsnip, turnip; raw vegetables — cabbage, tomatoes, carrots, onions, celery, cucumber, lettuce; cooked vegetables—asparagus, beets, carrots, cauliflower, cabbage, brussels sprouts, spinach, tomatoes, onions, string beans.

Foods with a low residue—rich or concentrated foods with little fibre or roughage—are: sugar, fats, meats, eggs, milk.

It can thus be seen that the foods that seem to be most "suitable" for warm or hot weather are the very foods that by their large bulk will satisfy the appetite and stomach and yet will not be as rich in fuel value as the foods that are more popular in cold weather.

Fortunately the warm weather makes the body perspire freely so that the large quantities of water and soft drinks that are consumed do not get a chance to add much if any weight to the overweight individual.

However, it can be readily seen that if during the hot weather the overweight individual will deny himself some of the liquid he so eagerly drinks he will reduce his weight greatly because water makes up much of the weight in these individuals.

Even if taking little or no exercise the hot weather will "melt off" some of the excess weight; and if exercise is taken the perspiration will greatly increase and with it much of the weight will fall away. If at this time when the body is hot from exercise very small quantities of water are taken, or if water is allowed to rest on the throat—gargling—and not allowed to go down the throat to the stomach the thirst will be about as well satisfied and the water will not get into the tissues to increase the weight.

Avoid Fat Foods.

Fortunately another class of food that is not popular in the summer is the fat foods—fat meat, cream, butter, rich pastry. Of course oil is used to some extent in the dressing which is used with salads but some fat "protective" food should be eaten by everybody.

Sugar—so rich in food value and so active as a fat storer—is not needed so much in the warm weather, and may be cut down with a little less regret or longing than during the cold weather.

Lean meat is valuable in reducing weight in the warm weather as it satisfies the appetite, builds worn tissue, but does not store fuel, and makes the body processes work faster, thus helping to burn up or prevent fat formation.

So get a start at weight reduction during the warm weather when everything is in your favor—less food needed, perspiration burning up or removing the fat, and very little exercise necessary to produce profuse perspiration.

I believe the above points should be sufficient to show the overweight individual that the warm weather is a good time in which to start weight reduction.

TRADING JOBS

The navigator and the chief engineer had an argument as to who was the most indispensable in operating the ship, whereupon the navigator agreed to take a try at the engineer officer's job and the engineer officer agreed to take the bridge.

After about half an hour's running, the ship stopped and the navigator crawled out of the engine-room hatch. His clothing was wet from perspiration and his features were covered with grease and grime.

"It's no use," said the navigator. "I can't seem to make the darned thing go again."

"Certainly not," said the chief engineer. "We're aground."—The Shipmate.

KNOWS HIS TASTES

Kid—Do you exchange goods that ain't wanted?

Druggist—Certainly. We like to please our customers.

Kid—Well, I've got fifteen cents' worth of castor oil we bought here. I want to exchange it for a chocolate sundae.

Playing in Luck

Muriel—And you're sure you've read through all the list of sweepwinners?

Milicent—Every blessed one.

Muriel—And you mean to say we haven't even got a tiny consolation prize?

Milicent—Not even a teeny share in one.

Muriel—I say, isn't it lucky I didn't but any tickets!—Stray Stories Magazine.

Secured Good Evidence

The magistrate fixed the policeman with an inquiring eye.

"And what caused you to think the prisoner was under the influence of drink?" he asked.

"Well, Your Honor, I found him in Trafalgar square throwing his walking-stick into a fountain and urging the lions on Nelson's Column to go in and fetch it."—Stray Stories Magazine.

Absent-Minded

Physician's Wife—Now, my dear, you must positively forget shop if you are going into society with me.

Her Hubby—What have I done?

Physician's Wife—Why, you feel the pulse of every one who extends a hand.

TO GET EVEN

"Why is your father so glad to get city boarders?"

"Well, yo' see, one of 'em sold him the Empire building last winter."

Not Tactful

"Don't you think my new dress is exquisite?"

"O, lovely! I think that dressmaker of yours could make a clothes - prop look graceful!"—Stray Stories Magazine.

At the Bank

Timid Soul—I would like to cash this check, please.

Chashier — What denomination, madam?

Timid Soul—Oh, I belong to the Corner Church.

Ostentation of Wealth

"Ostentation of wealth is something which good taste always avoids."

"Especially," said Senator Sorghum, "when the subject under discussion happens to be a campaign fund."

CHILLED LOAF FOR HOT DAYS

PEER of all luncheon loaves is a new recipe combining Brazil nuts, ham and potato salad. And when the dish finally is decked with lettuce, tomato and cucumber, it has appeal to the eye as well as the taste.

Simplicity itself in the making, it is adapted to the warmest days of summer—days when refrigerated food is most refreshing.

Chilling the loaf thoroughly for several hours in an automatic refrigerator is a new trick for the cook who usually thinks of baking meat loaves. Instructions for making the new dish are: Marinate potatoes and onion in French dressing for a half-hour. Add Brazil nuts and enough mayonnaise to moisten. Mix well and then pack half the potato salad in a medium-sized bread pan. Mix ham, mustard and enough mayonnaise to moisten, and then spread over potato salad. Pack in remaining potato salad and chill mixture in refrigerator several hours.

Serve on a chop plate garnished with sliced cucumbers, sliced tomatoes and romaine or lettuce.

BRAZIL NUT LOAF

2 cups diced cooked potatoes.
1-4 cup French dressing.
1 sliced onion.
3-4 cup sliced Brazil nuts.
Mayonnaise.
1-2 pound ground cooked ham.
1 teaspoon prepared mustard.
Sliced cucumbers.
Sliced tomatoes.
Romaine or lettuce.

Another refreshing recipe combines the delicate flavors of Brazil nuts, apples and celery in a fascinating salad. The approved recipe:

BRAZIL NUT, APPLE AND CELERY SALAD

1 1-2 cups diced apples, 1-2 cup sliced Brazil nuts, 1 1-2 cups finely chopped celery, Mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

Mix apple, celery and nuts with mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce and garnish with water-

Crowds Pour Into Exposition Grounds

Every day is a busy day at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland and this picture shows the crowds pouring across the Court of Presidents into the compact grounds of the Exposition. The grounds cover 150 acres lying along the cool shores of Lake Erie. Overhead are two of the blimps which take passengers for trips over the grounds and the city.
